

Angus McBryde

I am a multidisciplinary performing arts and events professional, thriving in dynamic environments by embracing diverse responsibilities, from strategic marketing and communications leadership to events logistics management, supported by strong visual identity and design experience. My strengths lie in adaptability, proactively taking on new challenges, collaborating across teams and stakeholders, and delivering impactful outcomes in festivals, venues, and creative projects while fostering growth, inclusivity, and innovation.

Career Highlights

- As Head of Marketing & Communications at the heritage UK music venue Band on the Wall, I rapidly assemble effective campaigns for national tours at short notice, driving strong ticket sales while adhering to budget constraints. Notable successes include Femi Kuti UK tours, multiple Lady Blackbird shows, and the London African Gospel Choir's celebration of the 40th anniversary of Paul Simon's Graceland.
- As Events & Logistics Manager for the New Zealand International Film Festival, I recruited and managed 150 volunteers and several paid staff across multiple venues, while organising key events including VIP launches, world premieres, and panel discussions, scouting and booking venues, managing timelines and budgets, conducting risk assessments, handling venue dressing, and ensuring flawless execution.
- As Founding Trustee and Creative Lead for Arcade Theatre Company, I devised the brand identity, logo, and website; established and ran social media channels; created artwork for over a dozen productions, led marketing campaigns for eight productions including print distribution, social media, and local media partnerships; coordinating a series of twelve 'Satellite Events'; and co-establishing the flagship storytelling event.

Key Strengths

- Multidisciplinary Expertise
With a foundation in graphic design and a decade in arts marketing, events, and logistics, I excel in blending creative and operational roles. From designing festival collateral and managing budgets to coordinating volunteer teams and executing campaigns, my versatile skill set – spanning CRM, video editing, and public relations – enables seamless delivery of complex projects in dynamic environments, adapting to new challenges across festivals, venues, and freelance work.
- Self-Starter and Adaptability
I thrive in initiating and embracing diverse responsibilities, transitioning from head of marketing and logistics manager to graphic designer in high-pressure settings. Whether devising national campaigns, producing events, or freelancing as a tour manager, writing and submitting funding applications, or optimizing workflows, I can pivot to meet evolving demands, consistently driving success in fast-paced, multi-stakeholder sectors.
- Collaborative Leadership
I foster strong teams and partnerships through people-focused guidance, nurturing colleagues, freelancers, and stakeholders while maintaining clear expectations on quality and deadlines. In roles like managing the marketing team at Band on the Wall and Auckland Arts Festival, my emphasis on inclusivity, emotional awareness, and relationship-building ensures cohesive execution of campaigns, events, audience development, and community projects in values-driven arts organizations.

Selected Work History

Head of Marketing and Communications, Band on the Wall, 2024–present

Lead promotion of in-house and external events, developing and implementing marketing strategies and campaigns while tracking success and managing the organisation's marketing budget. Oversee print and digital production, social media growth, press and PR activities, data analysis, audience development, and CRM enhancements; line-manage the Digital Marketing Manager; write press releases; build media relationships; organise networking events; and ensure GDPR compliance.

Events and Logistics Manager, NZ International Film Festival, 2023

Recruited and managed venue staff and 150 volunteers, organising and troubleshooting shift allocations across five central city cinemas. Oversaw delivery of external events – including programme launches, Q&A sessions, workshops, discussions, masterclasses, and musical performances – while arranging personal protection, conducting venue risk assessments, and hosting VIP guests.

Marketing Manager, Auckland Arts Festival, 2022–2024

Populated and maintained the festival website; managed distribution of 60,000 print programmes; collaborated with the Head of Marketing & Communications to refine strategy and messaging; and oversaw workflows, deadlines, and deliveries with the Senior Designer and Digital Content Manager. Assisted with design overflow including social media graphics and print/digital collateral; supported Education and Access & Inclusion teams; liaised with external partners; and designed a programme exhibition.

Head of Marketing and Communications, NZ International Science Festival, 2020–2021

Managed a large marketing budget; produced all in-house design collateral; booked advertising; wrote and distributed press releases; arranged media opportunities; negotiated contractor agreements; and planned and oversaw social media campaign rollout while contributing to the large-scale event as part of a small team – pivoting quickly to virtual formats amid the 2020 pandemic.

Marketing Manager, Dunedin Arts Festival, 2018–2022

Handled all graphic design output while fulfilling roles of marketing manager, publicist, and social media manager: created hero image, 60-page programme brochure, posters, collateral, ads, and website; coordinated media contracts, local promotions, print distribution, and an eleven-week social media campaign with original content; secured national PR coverage; and continued designing programmes and collateral for subsequent festivals.

Graphic Designer, Walsh and Beck, 2013–2015

Served as lead designer at a small full-service marketing and PR agency: created logos, print & digital advertising, websites, and collateral for clients while guiding them through the design process. Managed client expectations and timelines; oversaw print runs and deliveries; and consulted with the Director on design, client relations, and future planning during a pivotal growth phase.

Qualifications

Bachelor of Consumer and Applied Science (BCApSc)

in Communication Design, University of Otago, 2010